A Breeze from the West.

LENGTH, 650 FEET. PRICE, $71.50.

"Bud" O'Brien a big good natured cow puncher and his "gal" cut for a canter, visit his old friend Chief "Lame Deer" a friendly Indian. After an exchange of presents and pleasant reminiscences, "Bud" departs with his "Gal." They are not gone long when a band of hostile Indians of which Deer is the chief, come upon the scene and berate him for not taking to the war path with them and unable to reason with them, he dons his war bonnet and shirt and goes with them.

The next scene shows a company of U. S. Cavalry resting before a ranch and "Bud's" gal slyly giving a letter to a soldier to be delivered to "Bud" and serves for a 20 mile ride where the Indians are stealing cattle and massacreing the whites. On their ride they find "Bud" laying on the ground in delirium from an arrow in his side, sent there by the red skins. He is put in the saddle and they gallop off, attended by the surgeon; the camp is attacked and after a fierce battle, the Indians are routed. "Chief Deer" manages to sneak in and is about to brain "Bud" with a stone axe, when he recognizes him as his old friend and carries him out on his shoulder.

After "Bud's" complete recovery he marries the gal of his heart.

COPYRIGHT 1907

SMUGGLED INTO

AMERICA

S. LUBIN

LARGEST MANUFACTURER OF

LIFE MOTION PICTURE MACHINES,
FILMS, SLIDES AND STEREOPTICONS

926 Market Street, Philadelphia, Pa., U. S. A.

"SMUGGLED INTO AMERICA."

LENGTH, 750 FEET. COPYRIGHT 1907 PRICE, $82.50.

An American Chinaman is going to China to smuggle Chinese into this country.

He secures two Chinamen whom he dresses up as an Irish man and an Irish woman.

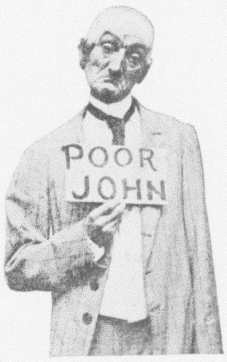
Upon arrival in this country one Chinaman is discovered, the other one escapes in a barrel marked "Limburger Cheese".

Now follows the most amusing scenes showing what happens to the barrel.

When at last the Chinaman is released, he really looks more like Limburger Cheese than like a Chinaman.

COPYRIGHT 1907

JOHN D-



AND THE

REPORTER

S. LUBIN

Largest Manufacturer of
FILMS, SLIDES, STEREOPTICON AND
LIFE MOTION PICTURE MACHINES
926 MARKET STREET
Philadelphia, Pa., U.S.A.